WHITE WASH

Builder Mike Telich and wife Kori, owners of Telich Custom Homes, describe their master bathroom as both “functional and elegant.” At the room’s entry from the master bedroom, a set of antique French doors from Ricca’s Architectural Salvage in New Orleans add warmth to the monochromatic space. The doors fold into an extra deep door jamb surfaced in wood paneling that was designed and installed by foreman James Taglienti. The floor-to-ceiling paneling application continues around the room to frame his and her vanities that have the appearance of being inset into the wall. Behind the double slipper tub, the paneling offers more textural detail. The floors, counters and shower walls are surfaced in white marble tiles and slabs. A chandelier that hangs in the center of the room has an aged silver patina and was sourced in Baton Rouge at Lamps and Lighting by Design.
